INTRODUCTION

In 1953 Unesco offers the fifth volume of its annual publication, International Handbook of Fellowships, Scholarships and Educational Exchange.

Since 1948, when the task was first undertaken, Study Abroad has increased the scope of its information as follows:

Volume	Year	Number of fellowship programmes listed	Number of study opportunities offered
I	1948	672	15,070
II	1949	1,326	24,203
III	1950-51	1,590	35,459
IV	1951-52	1,793	38,793
V	1952-53	1,893	43,000

These increases in part reflect a genuine growth in international fellowship programmes in the last five years, a proportion of which is accounted for by expanded governmental and international schemes for technical training designed to implement plans for social and economic development. But what the figures show more clearly is that Study Abroad itself has become a more comprehensive collection of information, so that now it covers a very high percentage of the international study opportunities that are offered.

THE PURPOSE OF THE HANDBOOK

Study Abroad is intended first and foremost as a handbook to which students can refer in order to discover the opportunities open to them for furthering their education in other countries. The search for such opportunities follows the tradition of many centuries' standing, that travel combined with study abroad is one of the most fertile stimulants to contact between cultures.

Unesco's interest in preparing the handbook goes further than that, however. It has been realized for a long time that the international exchange of students, teachers and research workers has a significance that reaches far beyond any question of individual motivation. Whatever the individual may gain personally from his foreign experiences, the cultural contacts he has helped to create are of outstanding importance in international relations, especially as they involve processes of education and learning, and the transfer of techniques and knowledge from one country to another in a manner which is not always achieved in commerce, tourism, or other types of intercultural activities.

It cannot be assumed that all educational exchanges are productive of better international understanding, but it is at least possible to investigate the conditions under which this is most likely to be attained. Many fellowship programmes fail to achieve all that was hoped for them because they are faultily conceived, planned and administered. However willing the individual student may be to take advantage of foreign study opportunities, the donors of fellowships must still be responsible for assuring that the best use is made of available funds by selecting the most promising students and providing the most suitable study facilities and supervision. This and many other aspects of fellowship programmes are equally worthy of consideration.

Before the publication of Study Abroad there was no comprehensive attempt to collect in an international handbook all the available information concerning study opportunities. Study Abroad is being revised and expanded each year and it is already apparent that its publication has had some important consequences. Not only does the information it gives stimulate the international flow of student exchanges by drawing attention to study opportunities that might otherwise have been missed, but it also contributes to the quality of fellowship programmes by producing a wide range of applications from which the best candidates can be chosen.

The fact that so much relevant information is assembled in a single volume permits an overall view of international student exchanges which has never before been possible. Each year of publication adds to the accuracy and value of Study Abroad in this respect, and enables the individual participant in fellowship programmes to understand something of the more far reaching implications of the international movement in which he is involved.

Study Abroad as a whole, therefore, is intended not only as a reference handbook for the individual student seeking study opportunities abroad. It is also intended for:

Planners and Administrators of Exchange of Persons programmes who can benefit from a handbook of current information within their fields of interest.

Donors of Fellowships who can ascertain some of the most promising yet neglected fields which deserve attention.

Government Departments and International Organizations which need a system of reference for national and international educational activities of interest to them.

Teachers, Instructors and Career Advisers in universities and other institutions, as a source for the guidance of their students.

Historical and Sociological Research workers, as a source-book for much information on cross-cultural education.

Instructions as to how to consult Part II of Study Abroad, which lists 1,893 fellowship and scholarship programmes, will be found on the Guide Page. But for those who are interested in some of the wider aspects of the international exchange of persons, the actual study opportunities that are offered each year provide only part of the information that they require. A more thorough conspectus of international fellowships and training schemes demands a further analysis of fellowship programmes, supplemented by additional information from other sources. Study Abroad also attempts to answer questions such as:

In what fields of study are most international fellowships offered?

Which countries offer the most fellowships?

Which countries of study are most frequently specified?

How many fellowships for international study are open to the nationals of each country?

What are some of the major trends in present exchange programmes?

What part do the United Nations, its Specialized Agencies, and governments play in the international exchange of persons?

An attempt is also made, on the basis of existing information, to answer other, equally important questions:

How many foreign students are there in each country?

What are they studying, and how are they supported?

How are the fellowships offered actually awarded?

What results do fellowship programmes achieve in terms of the interchange of knowledge and the increase of international understanding and co-operation?

How can fellowship programmes be more effectively planned and administered in order to achieve the aims for which they are intended?

As the scope of Study Abroad increases, more detailed information on these and other subjects will be included.

This year, Part I includes a general survey of exchange of persons operations in 1952, a statistical commentary on the fellowship offers reported in Volume IV, and some preliminary results of the world-wide survey conducted by Unesco of foreign student populations.

In previous volumes of Study Abroad, a report by the International Labour Office on the International Movement of Trainees has been included. The information required for this report is collected by the ILO through enquiries among the governments of its Member States, international organizations and associations concerned with the international movement of trainees. The next enquiry, which will be more comprehensive than any previously attempted, will not be completed until 1953, and since information already collected can be referred to in Volume IV of Study Abroad, this section has been omitted this year. Meanwhile, Unesco continues to maintain close relations with ILO in its general studies of manpower problems, in so far as they relate to international training of skilled and unskilled personnel.

OTHER UNESCO EXCHANGE OF PERSONS ACTIVITIES

Study Abroad is compiled each year from information collected by Unesco's Exchange of Persons clearing house. It does not, however, attempt to cover the whole possible range of international exchange of persons activities. It concentrates, rather, upon subsidized study and training opportunities, preferably of a long-term nature, which are open chiefly to persons of university status. Other Unesco publications cover the more specialized or limited fields. Vacation Supplement to Study Abroad reports on shorter-term study and travel opportunities open to a wide range of persons during their annual holidays. Workers Abroad, Teaching Abroad and Travel Abroad deal respectively with international exchanges of workers, teachers and youth, which although not commented or reported on in Study Abroad, constitute world-wide movements sponsored by numerous governments, associations and international organizations.

Volume II of Workers Abroad will concentrate chiefly upon descriptions of the Unesco projects in this field. Teaching Abroad which will be revised early in 1953, is primarily a document giving lists of vacancies for teachers from abroad in universities and other institutions, and of teachers of all grades who are prepared to offer their services in foreign institutions for limited periods. Travel Abroad, which is a service document for persons participating in educational travel has been revised completely, and includes information on the passport and visa regulations for 150 different countries and territories, and the currency regulations for 102 countries and territories, in so far as they affect persons travelling for educational and cultural purposes. There is also information on reductions in fares for groups travelling by rail in 40 countries, and on about 500 organizations in 56 countries and 30 international organizations which can assist young people travelling abroad by arranging study tours, accommodation and similar services.

Although these publications are generally devoted to international activities within specific fields, they are, in fact, also related to certain exchange of persons projects undertaken by Unesco. In the World Review of International Fellowship and Training Programmes in this volume of Study Abroad, reference is made to Unesco's participation in the United Nations Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance, and to fellowships offered to Member States in its regular programme. But in addition there are several more specialized exchange of persons activities which Unesco undertakes.

EXCHANGE OF WORKERS, TEACHERS AND YOUTH

In the field of workers' exchanges, Unesco's contribution is a Workers Travel Grant scheme, with the participation of important trade union, co-operative and workers' educational organizations. In 1952, 37 groups of workers, totalling about 760 persons from 12 European countries, were enabled, through travel grants, to participate in group educational travel in European countries other than their own.

Unesco is at present operating programmes for the exchange of teachers in two separate regions. In both regions the schemes are financed jointly by Unesco and the participating governments. In the Near East arrangements have been made for the reciprocal exchanges of six teachers between Egypt, Lebanon, Iraq and Hashemite Jordan. In Latin America there is a similar scheme for the reciprocal exchanges of eight teachers between Mexico, Ecuador, Cuba and Costa Rica.

Youth travel grants are arranged by Unesco in co-operation with youth and student organizations to cover the inter-regional travel costs of persons participating in international activities of an educational character such as seminars, discussion groups, conferences, and educational travel in connexion with subjects closely related to Unesco's programme. In 1952, 42 holders of Unesco travel grants, drawn from 32 nations and territories, took part in meetings and projects in Germany, Holland, India, Switzerland, Canada, France, Africa, Brazil, Lebanon, Mexico and El Salvador.

UNESCO UNIVERSITY COURSES

Under a newly initiated scheme whereby teams of eminent university teachers are sent for an academic year to universities where certain faculties need development, three social scientists, from the Netherlands, Denmark and the United States respectively, took up their duties in July 1952, at the University of Dacca, East Pakistan. A second team of three chemists, from France, Austria and Italy respectively will start teaching at the Central University of Caracas, Venezuela, in November 1952.

RESEARCH AND EVALUATION

Coupled with these Unesco Exchange of Persons programmes there is a research programme for the evaluation of fellowship and training schemes, and for the establishment of criteria for effective fellowship administration. An international meeting of experts was arranged to take place in Bangkok in December 1952. Reports on this meeting, which included on its agenda most of the topics likely to be of interest to fellowship administrators, with particular reference to the problems of Southern Asia, will be included in Volume VI of Study Abroad.

P A R T I

INTERNATIONAL FELLOWSHIP AND TRAINING PROGRAMMES

A WORLD REVIEW

During 1952, trends in the international exchange of persons continued along the line established in earlier post-war years. At the same time, there seems to be an increasing emphasis upon the type of programme, sponsored and financed by national governments or international organizations, which concentrates upon awards for studies contributing to economic and social development in the countries of the fellowship holders.

These latter types of fellowship are found partly in programme which can be classified under the general term "Technical Assistance", and partly in the national programmes of countries which are in need of economic and social development, but lack adequate institutions at home for training specialized personnel.

In spite of their importance, however, fellowships of this type only account for a relatively small percentage of the total number of opportunities reported in Study Abroad. This review is divided therefore, into three main parts. The first deals with Technical Assistance programmes, in so far as they are implemented by international fellowships. The second deals with the regular programmes of the United Nations and its Specialized Agencies, which although sometimes co-ordinated with the Technical Assistance programmes, must be considered more as a means of promoting the aims of the international organizations concerned. In the third part, attention is turned to national programmes which are making important contributions to the world-wide movement of fellows, scholars and trainees.

TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAMMES

Opportunities for study abroad, in the form of fellowships, scholarships and training grants, represent one of the most important means of implementing Technical Assistance programmes. But these opportunities in themselves only represent one part of such plans. It is usual to find that Technical Assistance fellowship programmes are closely integrated at a governmental and international level with a more general plan for social and economic development which may also include the provision of expert services and essential equipment.

From the standpoint of the individual student in an underdeveloped country, participation in a Technical Assistance programme as a fellowship holder is not simply a consequence of desiring to study abroad in a subject of his own choice, but of being able to integrate his own qualifications and motives with the overall plan or specific projects for economic and social development. In particular, the qualifications that he will acquire abroad must be considered in the light of whether, on his return, he will be able to replace a foreign expert already at work in his country, or if not, to be employed in a previously unfilled position related to the project for which he was trained.

Many of the fellowships listed in Study Abroad represent training grants of this nature. Specialized training can contribute greatly to the effectiveness of Technical Assistance programmes. But in order to produce a balanced educational development in underdeveloped countries, it is still necessary that this specialization should be supplemented by other types of programmes, giving a more general training, which are designed to provide study opportunities for some of the best potential scholars of a country, regardless of immediate relevance to economic and social development.

At present there are four major agencies operating Technical Assistance programmes. The United Nations Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance receives contributions from 62 nations and had projects in operation in 75 countries and territories by the end of 1951. A second important agency is the Council for Technical Co-operation in South and South-East Asia, commonly known as the "Colombo Plan". In this there is co-operation between 16 countries and colonial territories which are mostly, but not exclusively, within the British Commonwealth. A third Technical Assistance agency is to be found in the Organization of American States, which, through its various specialized agencies, promotes technical co-operation in numerous fields throughout the whole of North and South America, with the exception of Canada. The outstanding characteristic of the Technical Co-operation Programme of the Organization of American States is its promotion of a series of institutes and training centres which draw upon experts from Member Countries for the purposes of instruction, and offers fellowship facilities to a number of trainees each year. The fourth Technical Assistance agency, which is operated on a national basis by the United States Government through agreements with other countries, is the "Point 4" programme, run by the Technical Co-operation Administration in the Department of State. Although closely co-ordinated with other internationally organized Technical Assistance programmes "Point 4" activities are operationally quite distinct from them.

THE UNITED NATIONS EXPANDED PROGRAMME OF TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE

The first phase of the Expanded Programme began in July 1950 and ended on 31 December 1951. The second financial period was entered into in 1952. The co-operating agencies are the United Nations, International Labour Organisation, Food and Agricultural Organization, Unesco, International Civil Aviation Organization, World Health Organization, International Telecommunication Union and the World Meteorological Organization. For many projects there is close co-operation between the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund and the World Health Organization, whereby the former provides equipment and the latter expert services. The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development and the International Monetary Fund are not titular members of the Technical Assistance Board; nevertheless they are represented at meetings and co-operate fully in the promotion of the programme's objectives. In addition, there is co-operation with the Technical Assistance Division of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East.

By the end of 1951, 797 technical experts had been provided for 75 underdeveloped countries and territories and, by the end of March 1952, an additional 227 experts had been recruited. Altogether the experts had been drawn from 61 countries.

Up to the end of 1951, 845 fellowships and scholarships were awarded. The following table shows the distribution of awards according to the main fields of study and training in which each organization undertakes responsibility.

Altogether fellows and scholars were drawn from 46 countries. Countries which received 30 or more fellowships or scholarships each were as follows: Brazil 32, Burma 36, Ecuador 35, Greece 30, India 99, Iran 61, Israel 75, Libya 34, Pakistan 71, Philippines 34, Syria 40, Thailand 57.

The fellows and scholars visited 45 countries in the course of their studies. The leading host countries were: United States, 228 visits; United Kingdom, 165 visits; France, 100 visits; Netherlands, 56 visits; Canada, 55 visits; Sweden, 45 visits; Belgium, 40 visits; India, 36 visits; Switzerland, 35 visits; Ceylon 34 visits.

Up to the end of March 1952 a further 232 fellowships were awarded, and at 1 August 1952 859 fellowships and scholarships were held. It is anticipated that in 1953 the programme will be further increased.

A notable feature of the Expanded Programme of Technical Assistance is the system of joint projects in many of the countries receiving assistance, in which two or more of the Specialized Agencies co-operate with the country concerned, and with other agencies interested in the type of aid being given. Some of these projects take the form of regional training centres for trainees from the surrounding countries.

At the end of 1951, for instance, a temporary International Training Centre on Vital Statistics and Health Statistics for South-East Asia was set up in Ceylon, with 31 participants from eight countries, under the joint sponsorship of the Government of Ceylon, WHO and the United Nations. Also in 1951, 30 representatives from 12 Latin American countries participated in an intensive three-months' programme at the Latin American Training Centre for Agricultural Statistics in Costa Rica. This programme was organized by FAO with the co-operation of the Governments of Costa Rica and the United States of America, the Inter-American Statistical Institute, the Organization of American States and the United Nations. Some of the more sustained projects can be found in Unesco's network of Fundamental Education Centres. The first of these was opened at Patzcuaro, Mexico, in 1951, with the co-operation of the Mexican Government, Unesco, FAO, ILO, WHO and 16 participating nations. In 1952 there were 110 students enrolled, and by 1953 this should have been raised to 150. The second centre, for the Arab States, will open at Sirs-el-Layan, Egypt, early in 1953, with the co-operation of the Egyptian Government, Unesco, United Nations, WHO, FAO, ILO and six participating nations.

"COLOMBO PLAN"

The Council for Technical Co-operation in South and South-East Asia was established as the result of a meeting held in Colombo early in 1950. The original participants were countries of the British Commonwealth and British colonial territories in South and South-East Asia. It was intended from the start that neighbouring countries should also participate. As a result, Burma, Nepal, Viet-Nam, Laos and Cambodia have joined the Council, and the Philippines, Thailand and Indonesia send observers.

The Colombo Plan does not attempt to provide an overall scheme for development throughout the whole region. Rather, it invites its participants to produce their own plans for the six years from 1951-57. The Council then acts as a centre for co-ordination and information as to how finance, capital goods and expert assistance, including training facilities, can be provided in order to meet the needs of the programmes. Help and guidance can be given in the preparation and development of plans, but if a country wishes to handle its own situation independently, it is at liberty to do so. The position at the end of June 1952 was as follows:

Experts

Sixty-five experts had been provided from the following countries: United Kingdom, 28; Australia, 20; New Zealand, 11; Canada, 3; India, 3.

Trainees

Total number of trainees requested, 1,195; negotiations completed for, 548; negotiations proceeding for, 612; Requests in abeyance, 35.

In the 548 cases where negotiations had been completed, the trainees were drawn from the following countries: Ceylon, 121; India, 198; Pakistan, 163; Indonesia, 16; Federation of Malaya, 27; Nepal, 5; Philippines, 3; Sarawak, 6; Singapore, 1; Thailand, 4; North Borneo, 4.

Five hundred and forty-eight training facilities for these had been found in the following countries: United Kingdom, 132; Australia, 198; New Zealand, 95; Canada, 86; India, 36; Pakistan, 1.

The periods of training range from brief 2-3 week missions to full courses of 3 or 4 years, and embrace an exceedingly wide variety of fields of study.

For example: two Ceylonese customs officers have been sent to study in the United Kingdom for three months; five Indians to study highway engineering in Australia and New Zealand for 5-6 months; 23 Indians to study coal mining in the United Kingdom for six months; one Pakistani to study livestock breeding in New Zealand for a year; two Indonesians to study statistics in India for six months; three Malaysians to study medicine in Australia; one Nepalese to study aeronautical engineering in Australia for four years; one person from North Borneo to study accountancy in New Zealand for four years; one Filipino to study public health and tropical medicine in Australia; one person from Sarawak to study forestry in Australia for four years; one from Singapore to hold a mathematics scholarship in New Zealand for three years; three Thais to study statistics in India for six months.

ORGANIZATION OF AMERICAN STATES

The 1952 Technical Co-operation Programme of the Organization of American States listed seven projects that had already been initiated by February 1952. The following countries were enabled to participate in some or all of these projects: Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, Ecuador, El Salvador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, U.S.A., Uruguay, Venezuela.

Training Centre for Economics and Financial Statistics. Organized by the Inter-American Statistical Institute for a duration of five years. The Centre is situated in Chile, and provides training for about 30 students each year.

Training in Co-ordinated Services for Indigenous Communities. Organized by the Inter-American Indian Institute, for a duration of three years. The project is conducted in Mexico. During the first year four trainees each will be taken from Bolivia, Ecuador, Guatemala, Mexico and Peru.

Training Centres for Directors of Co-operative Movements. Organized by the Pan American Union for a duration of one and a half years. The first of three centres is situated in Puerto Rico. Fellowship aid is provided for three trainees from each Member country.

Inter-American Housing Research and Training Centre. Organized by the Pan American Union for a duration of five years. The Centre is situated in Bogota, Colombia, and it is proposed that one trainee should be taken yearly from each of the 21 Member countries.

Workshop on Administration of Children's Services. Organized by the American International Institute for the Protection of Childhood, for a duration of three years. The Centre is situated in Montevideo, Uruguay. Proposed that each year seven American countries should send one representative each for a two-month period of training and orientation, to be followed by a one-month visit by field teams provided by the Institute to the countries to which the representatives had returned in order to organize similar workshops on a national basis.

Technical Education for the Improvement of Agriculture and Rural Life. Organized by the Inter-American Institute of Agricultural Sciences for a duration of five years. A temporary centre for the Northern Zone is situated in Costa Rica, and the centre for the Southern Zone in Uruguay. Proposed that 125 students should receive four months' training each. In addition, 40 students to be trained on fellowships from national agencies, 10 to receive grants for undergraduate university work and 16 to complete their graduate studies.

Provision of Training and Consultant Services through the Establishment of Pan American Afosa Centre. Organized by the Pan American Sanitary Bureau and the Inter-American Institute of Agricultural Sciences, for a duration of five years. The centre is located in Brazil, and provides for one trainee from each Member country to study the various problems' controlling foot-and-mouth disease.

Four additional projects have been proposed. These are to provide for a Workshop on Teaching of Communicable Disease Nursing, an Institute for Advanced Studies in City Planning, an Inter-American Training Centre for Teachers of Rural Normal Schools and a Training Centre for Evaluation of Natural Resources.

UNITED STATES "POINT FOUR" PROGRAMME

By the end of May 1952 the Technical Co-operation Administration had 823 technical and professional employees and 88 clerical and administrative assistants operating in under-developed countries as part of its programme of Technical Assistance.

For its 1952 training programme, 1,135 grants had been authorized and 294 actually made. Not all the recipients of awards had yet arrived in the United States, but including the recipients of grants made in previous years there were actually, at that time, 409 in training. Some 82 of these came from the Near East and Africa, 106 from South Asia, and 221 from the American republics. The leading countries with trainees in the United States under "Point Four" programme were Pakistan, 60; Brazil, 36; India, 31; Peru, 31; Egypt, 25; Iran, 25; Bolivia, 22; Ecuador, 22.

These trainees were being supervised by the following agencies of the Federal Government: Federal Security Agency, 93; Department of Agriculture, 76; Department of Commerce, 58; Institute of Inter-American Affairs, 73; Department of the Interior, 61; Department of Labour, 30; Bureau of the Budget, 16; Housing and Home Finance Agency, 1; Federal Communications Commission, 1.

REGULAR FELLOWSHIP PROGRAMME OF THE UNITED NATIONS AND ITS SPECIALIZED AGENCIES

Several of the Specialized Agencies of the United Nations, in addition to planning and administering large Technical Assistance fellowship programmes, have for some years been promoting fellowship programmes of their own, financed from their ordinary budgets, as an essential means of promoting their overall programmes. The fellowships awarded are normally offered through the governmental channels of Member States, and not as the result of direct applications by individuals to the international organizations concerned.

UNITED NATIONS

Most United Nations fellowships and scholarships are now offered under the Expanded Programme for Technical Assistance. There is, however, a regular programme under which about 65 internships are awarded annually for study and observation, in New York and Geneva, of the United Nations Organization and its General Assembly. Twenty-five are awarded to Civil Servants of UN Member States, and to officials of interested non-governmental organizations and of trade unions with international affiliations, and 40 to students from UN Member States.

A type of United Nations fellowship programme which was announced for the first time in 1952 originated in a resolution of the General Assembly inviting Member States to offer fellowships to the inhabitants of Trust Territories to further their educational advancement. So far, offers have been received from the Federal People's Republic of Yugoslavia and from the Government of India, while an interest in the project is also being shown by certain other Member States. (For details see entries under A 490 and A 1893, in Part II.)

INTERNATIONAL BANK

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development has a training programme under which about eight awards are made annually for the study of Bank history, purposes, organization, operating policies and procedures. In the four years that the programme has been in operation, a total of 31 trainees from 29 countries have taken part. The Bank has employed nine of these trainees, but the intention for the future is that they should return home on the completion of their courses and contribute to the development of their countries.

INTERNATIONAL CIVIL AVIATION ORGANIZATION

ICAO runs a training programme, similar in its scope to the internships of other Specialized Agencies, under which about six persons nominated by the governments of its Contracting States are brought to headquarters at Montreal for three months to work and observe its organization.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANISATION

In 1951 the ILO expanded the regular fellowship programme first established in 1950. Twenty-seven fellowships were offered and 16 actually awarded as follows:

To Austria, Guatemala, Haiti and Iceland in Labour Law; to Viet-Nam, Yugoslavia and Cape Verde (Portuguese Non-Metropolitan Territory) in Labour Inspection; to Pakistan, in Industrial Welfare; to Israel, in Vocational Training; to Brazil, in Co-operation; to Cuba, Thailand and Iraq, in Social Security; to Brazil, in Co-operation; to Cuba, Thailand and Iraq, in Social Security; to Finland, in Industrial Safety; to Australia and Turkey, in Industrial Relations. Fellowship holders studied in the United Kingdom, U.S.A., France, Switzerland, Chile, Netherlands, Belgium and Sweden.

The ILO also has an internship programme, available to the nominees of governments, employers' organizations and workers' organizations, for about 12 persons each year to study the purposes, methods and work of the ILO for two months.

UNITED NATIONS INTERNATIONAL CHILDREN'S EMERGENCY FUND

Under its 1951 programme Unicef awarded 112 fellowships in pediatrics, public health, child health, public health nursing, and social work, particularly in relationship to maternal and child health. Some 67 were awarded to nationals of European countries, 26 to Latin America, and 19 to Asia. Fellowship holders studied in the U.S.A., the United Kingdom, Switzerland, France, the Netherlands, New Zealand, India, Brazil, Denmark, Germany, Ecuador, Mexico and Jamaica.

Unicef fellowships are administered by the World Health Organization.

UNESCO

The Unesco regular fellowship programme in 1952 consisted of 65 awards, permitting at least one to be made to each Member State which wished to avail itself of the offer and also to selected Non-self-governing Territories. The chief characteristic of the Unesco fellowships is that they are co-ordinated as far as possible with the whole Unesco programme for the current year. The 65 awards are divided into four main categories. Forty are for mature persons who can benefit from a course of study or research abroad in their selected subjects within Unesco's field of interest. Ten are for manual or non-manual workers of a sufficient educational level who would not normally have the opportunity of studying other countries at first hand. Ten are for teaching about the United Nations, and are open chiefly to educational experts or administrators. Five are internships for study, work and observation in the Unesco Secretariat, and are awarded to mature persons engaged in a specific activity at a national level which is directly related to one of the major activities of Unesco's programme.

In 1952, 39 awards were made in the first category. The fields of study related to Unesco's programme which the beneficiary States selected were as follows:

Technical Education: Afghanistan, China, El Salvador.

Compulsory Education: Burma.

Adult Education: Guatemala, Hashemite Jordan, Sweden.

Fundamental Education: Jamaica and the Gold Coast (British Non-self-governing Territories), Cambodia, French Non-self-governing Territories (2), Iran, Korea, Nicaragua, Panama, Peru, Venezuela.

Films and Fundamental Education: France.

Educational Statistics: Ecuador, Israel.

The Role of Museums in Education: Australia, Denmark.

Public Library Development: Germany.

Conservation of Cultural Objects: Greece, Norway, Thailand.

Use of Scientific Literature: Belgium.

Social Science Teaching and Research: Netherlands, Switzerland.

Tensions and Social Change: Lebanon.

Mathematical Computing Machines: Italy, South Africa.

Mass Communications: Mexico.

Press: New Zealand.

Film: Syria.

Radio: Brazil.

Implementation of Human Rights: Canada.

International Co-operation: Haiti.

Teaching about the United Nations. Eight fellowships were awarded to candidates from Egypt, Iraq, Liberia, Colombia, Mexico, Denmark, United Kingdom and New Zealand.

Workers' fellowships. Ten were awarded to candidates from Ceylon, India, Japan, Pakistan, Egypt, Bolivia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Uruguay and British Non-self-governing Territories.

Internships. Five were awarded to candidates from Indonesia, Thailand, Turkey, Brazil and Ecuador.

Unesco-sponsored Fellowships. Certain fellowships which are financed by other donors are administered by Unesco, and co-ordinated as far as is practicable with the current Unesco programme. The sponsored fellowships which were in operation in 1952 were as follows:

Unesco-British Press Fellowships. The last of a series of six fellowships was awarded to an Austrian.

Unesco-American Chemical Society Fellowships. The last of a series of fellowships was awarded to a Filipino for study in the United States.

Unesco-Netherlands Fellowships. Awards were made to an Israeli, a Brazilian and a Korean for study in the Netherlands.

Unesco-Gilchrist Educational Trust Fellowships. An award for specialized research in the United Kingdom was made to a Yugoslav.

Unesco-Greek Government Fellowships. Awards were made to students from France and Italy, for historical research on Mount Athos.

Unesco-French Government Fellowships. Seven awards have been made to Indians, two to Pakistanis and one to a Thai, for study in France.

American Women's Organizations. New fellowship schemes for women only have been initiated by several women's organizations in the United States of America. Among these are the Soroptimists International Organization, the Wisconsin Federation of Women's Clubs, the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs and the Ohio Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

WORLD HEALTH ORGANIZATION

The total WHO fellowship programme is financed from Technical Assistance, Unicef and regular budget funds. Much of the responsibility for fellowship programmes is decentralized to six regional offices, and efforts are made to co-ordinate the programmes with the specific health projects of governments assisted by the organization.

The fellowships offered fall into two categories. Firstly, individual fellowships for post-graduate study and observation of practices, techniques and research, of which 400 are offered, and secondly, fellowships to attend group training programmes (courses, symposia, seminars) organized by WHO or assisted by it, of which about 250 are offered.

In 1951, 511 awards were made, of which 212 were for group training as opposed to individual study. Some 16 beneficiaries were from the African region, 55 from the American region, 40 from the South-East Asian region, 296 from the European region, 85 from the Eastern Mediterranean region, 18 from the Western Pacific region and 1 from Libya.

Of these awards, 339 were for the study of Health Organization and Services, 101 for Communicable Disease Services, and 71 for Clinical, Medical Services and Education.

For the 511 fellows, 393 visits were planned to countries of study.

Ten WHO fellows visited the African region for study, 182 the American region, 52 the South-East Asian region, 584 the European region, 30 the Eastern Mediterranean region 32 the Western Pacific region, and one each Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia.

Of the 511 awards, 172 were for inter-regional study, while 339 incorporated study within a specified region.

INTERNATIONAL NON-GOVERNMENTAL ORGANIZATIONS

The International Association for the Exchange of Students for Technical Experience accounts for a high proportion of the opportunities listed. This fact, combined with the exceptional nature of its activities, justifies a special mention of IAESTE's operations in 1952.

From the 920 students exchanged in 1948, the number able to obtain technical experience abroad under IAESTE's sponsorship has risen to 3,493 in 1952. This is achieved at a negligible administrative cost through the co-operation of numerous universities, technical training institutes and commercial and industrial firms in 16 countries—Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Iceland, Israel, Italy, Netherlands, Norway, Spain, Switzerland, U.S.A. and Yugoslavia.

Exchanges take place during vacations, since the participants are students drawn from about 23 types of technical study in universities and institutes. They thereby gain the opportunity of industrial experience with firms abroad related to their subject of study. The cost of the exchanges is covered chiefly by payments to the participants by the receiving firms paying participants comparable rates to those given to unskilled workers in the countries they visit. In 1952, the 3,493 students who were exchanged worked a total of 28,000 weeks in international industry, and received in payment a total contribution of over $161,000.

FELLOWSHIP AND TRAINING PROGRAMMES IN SOME OF UNESCO'S MEMBER STATES

Of the fellowships reported in Study Abroad, those offered by international organizations, including not only the United Nations and its Specialized Agencies, and a number of international, non-governmental organizations, amount to no more than 15 per cent of the total listed. The remainder are reported under the country from which each offer originated. This arrangement provides an easy method of assessing the role of fellowships in each country's contribution to the international exchange of persons for educational purposes.

As well as listing the awards offered Study Abroad also presents an analysis of some of the trends and consequences involved in this general process. But even this does not necessarily draw attention to the great contribution that is made by countries receiving large numbers of fellowship-holders of nationalities other than their own. Just as the offers of fellowships may represent either governmental or private undertakings, so also is responsibility for the reception and supervision of foreign students usually shared among various agencies. In addition to considering the fellowships that a nation gives, it is equally important to take into account its activities and achievements in this respect.

In practice it is usually found that the countries which offer most fellowships are also those that receive the most students. This is accounted for partly by the fact that many of the fellowships are offered specifically in order to bring students from abroad. But in addition to this, it is usually the countries that can afford the largest government and institutional programmes which also possess the technological training facilities so much sought after by underdeveloped countries. For instance, a major responsibility for receiving Technical Assistance scholars and trainees rests with relatively few European and American countries.

For the size and scope of its fellowship and training operations the United States of America is in an outstanding position today. This position has been established through an abundance of study facilities in most fields, supported by a realization of the desirability of establishing close cultural relationships with other countries. It is probable that the United States, with its 30,000 foreign student population, draws more students from outside its region than all the countries of Western Europe combined. The Rockefeller, Carnegie and Ford Foundations continue to have an immense influence on international fellowship projects, while there are numerous universities and smaller foundations which also make important contributions.

An agency which now holds a position of considerable importance in all fields connected with fellowship programmes and educational exchanges is the Institute of International Education. During 1951 the Institute selected and placed 4,250 persons in programmes for 1951-52. Of these, 3,326 were students and specialists coming to the United States, and 924 were Americans going abroad. Advice on study plans and scholarship opportunities was given to more than 100,000 persons. More than 5,000 applications for Fulbright graduate study abroad were processed by the Institute.

The financial contributions of the U.S. Government itself towards the exchange of persons are themselves immense: the Fulbright programme alone has achieved impressive dimensions. In addition to the large share which is contributed towards international organizations and the operation of "Point Four" Technical Assistance programme the State Department's Educational Exchange Service of the International Information Administration sponsored 7,158 grants in aid for exchanges between the United States and 70 foreign countries during 1951. Of these, 5,630 were invited to the United States for study, teaching, observation and research, and 1,528 were Americans undertaking similar activities abroad. The Educational Exchange Service also assisted 464 organizations, through which about 4,800 persons were exchanged.

The Mutual Security Administration exchanged over 3,600 persons under its Technical Assistance Programme, and more than 1,000 additional persons in the fields of education, industry, agriculture and public health.

The Department of the Army brought more than 1,000 persons into the United States under its reorientation programme for Japan and the Ryu-Kyu Islands.

Among European countries the leading positions are held by France and the United Kingdom, both of which, in relation to their populations, are accepting very large shares in the responsibility both for providing facilities for advanced research workers and for students and trainees from underdeveloped countries.

In the United Kingdom, the most important agency dealing with foreign students is the British Council. Its annual award of about 500 scholarships and bursaries accounts for nearly a quarter of all the offers listed for the United Kingdom. But the British Council is also the administering agency for United Nations fellowships and scholarships. Altogether, it handles about 3,500 study visits each year, involving the elaboration of study programmes, placing in universities and institutions, and arrangements for group tours. In addition, the British Council is responsible for the welfare of all colonial students in the United Kingdom, who in 1952 numbered about 5,000.

A high proportion of the fellowships offered by France originate from governmental sources. One of the largest donors is the Department of Cultural Relations in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Periods of study may vary, but altogether 7,500 months of fellowships are offered to the nationals of other countries for study in France, and 850 months of fellowships are offered to French nationals for study abroad. Several hundred scholarships and grants are also offered to German students. The other major donors are the administrations of French overseas territories, under whose schemes about 2,000 students are brought to France each year. In addition there are the programmes of the Department of Economic Affairs, the National Centre for Scientific Research and the Ministry of National Education. The contributions of the French government towards the maintenance of the numerous foreign students in their country cannot be estimated from the number of awards alone, for they are also assisted by way of subsidized meals and medical assistance.

Other European countries which, in relation to their size of population, are performing almost as big a role are: Switzerland, Sweden, the Netherlands and Belgium, which together can account for about 20 per cent of the foreign students in Europe. The Netherlands and Belgium, in common with France and the United Kingdom, have continuing responsibilities towards non-metropolitan territories which involve the provision of study opportunities. Germany is also recovering its position as a country receiving many foreign students. But the study facilities provided by these countries are by no means limited to the opportunities they can offer to underdeveloped countries. They are also centres for advanced research in most academic subjects. Many of the exchanges result from bilateral cultural agreements with other European countries. Belgium, for example, reports exchanges of 48 university professors with France, Great Britain and the Netherlands, and 136 exchanges of research fellows with France, Italy, Norway, Great Britain, Luxembourg and the Netherlands.

Among the countries outside Europe and the United States which are making considerable contributions towards the training of persons from underdeveloped countries, are Australia, New Zealand and Canada. It is noteworthy that in 1952 Australia received 200 trainees under the Colombo Plan alone, and had, altogether, over 2,000 foreign students, mostly from Southern Asia.

The term "underdeveloped country" can, of course, only be used strictly of a country which has applied for, and been granted, some form of Technical Assistance for its economic and social development. Some of the countries that have been scheduled as underdeveloped in this sense have, in fact, reached a high educational level in other respects and have much to offer foreign students in certain types of study facilities. We therefore find examples of countries which are sending their own students abroad for advanced training and at the same time receiving students from other countries. The outstanding case is Egypt.

Egypt reports that in 1951, 733 of her nationals were studying overseas, 350 in the United Kingdom, 191 in the United States, 118 in France, 42 in Switzerland, 14 in Spain, 6 in Germany, 6 in Italy and 6 in Syria. But at the same time she is assuming a position of leadership among the Arab and Moslem States, and offers numerous scholarships and fellowships, chiefly to these countries, in order to provide opportunities for study in the centre of Moslem culture that is found in Cairo. As part of her national programme Egypt has also sent 325 schoolteachers to Arab and Eastern States, and has received groups of students and teachers on educational tours from Syria, Lebanon, Iraq, Greece and Australia.

Among the countries of Southern Asia, India has made remarkable progress in providing the educational facilities necessary to her social and economic development. A notable feature was the conduct of a scientific manpower survey in order to assess the supply and demand for specialized personnel on a nationwide scale. For some time to come there must be a dependence upon overseas training resources. India has made a number of requests for Technical Assistance under Point Four, the Colombo Plan and the United Nations programmes and has received offers of fellowships and training facilities from the United States, the United Kingdom, France, Italy and Germany, while she sends a large number of her nationals abroad for specialized training. The point has arrived, however, when India herself is offering scholarships and training facilities to other countries. Seventy scholarships are offered every year to students of Indian and non-Indian origin, and of Commonwealth and foreign countries for higher education in India. India has also provided training facilities under the Colombo Plan, and has sent teachers to teach in schools in Afghanistan, Malaya and Uganda.

Although faced with difficult educational problems of her own, Pakistan, too, is offering fellowships to students from abroad. Opportunities are offered to candidates from Aden, British Somaliland, Burma, Ceylon, Fiji, Indonesia, Iraq, Malaya, Mauritius, Turkey and Saudi Arabia.

Among Latin American countries which had a regional total of more than 9,000 foreign students, the most important centres for foreign student study can be found in Argentina, Chile, Mexico and Uruguay. The majority of these students, however, come from other countries within the same region. This intra-regional exchange within Latin America dates from the second world war, prior to which Latin American students tended more generally to go to Europe. This movement is supported in several cases by offers of fellowships restricted to candidates from other Latin American countries. But there are also several important examples of governmental programmes for sending students abroad for study, often to the United States or Europe. A new scheme which is worth noting is reported from Brazil. As part of a development programme, she has initiated an extensive fellowship programme under the guidance of CAPES (Campanha Nacional de Aperfeiçoamento de Pessoal de Nivel Superior).

The two broad objectives of CAPES are: (a) To assure the availability of specialized staff in sufficient quantity and quality to attend to the necessities of public and private enterprises which aim at the economic and social development of Brazil. (b) To offer every access to higher education to citizens, of ability whose financial means are limited.

One part of the programme envisages the introduction of non-Brazilian professors and academic experts, while another provides for promising young professionals to be sent abroad for two or more years for further specialization.

Entries for Japan are reported in Study Abroad for the first time this year. Japan has already sent a considerable number of students overseas and receives relatively large numbers of foreign students. It is probable that there will be some interesting developments here in the future.

Particulars of national programmes which are not mentioned here can be found under the appropriate entries. With the aid of the statistical tables of fellowship offers and the results of the survey of foreign student populations, a more complete picture can be built up of exchange of persons activities in each individual country.

UNESCO FOREIGN STUDENT ENQUIRY, 1951-52

In 1952 Unesco undertook for the first time an enquiry into foreign students enrolled in universities and institutes of higher learning throughout the world.

In the United States of America, France and Belgium, figures of this nature are already compiled by centralized agencies for each country. Questionnaires were therefore sent to over 1,000 universities and institutions throughout the rest of the world. The replies received numbered 355.

Of these replies, 150 related to institutions included in the International University Bureau's International List of Universities for 1952, which gives 698 major universities and university colleges of the world. Replies were not, however, received from Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, China, Hungary, Poland, Rumania and the U.S.S.R. When the universities covered by the separate enquiries in Belgium, France and U.S.A. are taken into account, it can be assessed that the Unesco enquiry would seem to have covered about 60 per cent of the principal universities of the world from which information could be expected. In addition, replies received by Unesco cover over 200 other colleges and institutions not included in the Belgian, French or U.S. enquiries.

The table given here represents only a preliminary report on the enquiry, showing the total numbers of foreign students in each country. The results of an analysis of the nationalities of the students, the subjects they were studying, and other types of information obtained will be published later.

It will be apparent that the accuracy of the figures for each country is partly a reflection of the number of institutions that sent replies, and of the relative importance of these institutions as recipients of foreign students. For some countries the totals would appear to be fairly accurate, while in others they fall well below estimates derived from other sources. Nevertheless, as a picture of foreign student populations, the results can be considered quite successful for the first year in which such an enquiry was made. It seems probable that at least 80 per cent of the foreign students in universities and institutions of higher learning have been accounted for.

It is hoped that future enquiries, which will profit from the experience gained in this year's enquiry, and will be made annually, will serve to provide an important part of the statistical background to an understanding of the significance of international student exchanges.

STATISTICAL COMMENTARY ON VOLUME IV OF STUDY ABROAD

Some 38,793 offers of study opportunities were listed in volume IV of Study Abroad. These offers, shown according to the regions of the world from which they originated, are given in the table below in relation to those reported in previous volumes.

SUMMARY TABLE

FELLOWSHIPS REPORTED IN THE FIRST FOUR VOLUMES OF
"STUDY ABROAD"

Totals	15,070	24,203	35,459	38,793

These figures show a general increase in the number of fellowships reported for most regions. Only in the cases of Latin America and the Near and Middle East are there slight decreases compared with the previous year. In Volume III there was a sharp decrease in the number reported for South and East Asia, which was largely due to a considerable reduction in overseas fellowship programmes on the part of India and Thailand. The figure in Volume IV has now once again exceeded the number reported in Volume I for that region.

For the purposes of analysis, the fellowship figures can be broken down by fields of study, countries of study, donating countries and beneficiary countries. But in addition to the United Nations, its Specialized Agencies, and international non-governmental organizations, which together are classed as "International", there were 90 donating countries and territories shown in Volume IV of Study Abroad. Similarly there were 112 countries and territories singled out as the beneficiaries of awards, and in addition a category of "stateless persons and refugees". Therefore, in the tables, given on pages 26 to 32, the course generally followed, has been to show donors and beneficiaries by regions rather than by individual territories.

Table I. Main Fields of Study in Relation to Donating Regions (page 26). This table shows no very marked trends in relation to the comparable table published the previous year. As usual, the subjects of study for a large number of fellowships remain unspecified. This year, however, in cases where two or more fields have been specified they have been shown under "others", thus reducing considerably the percentage under "unspecified". Apart from this the most noticeable changes are found in the reduction of the percentage allotted to the medical and natural sciences, and the increase for engineering and agriculture.

Table II. Relationships between Regions of Study and Donors (page 27). This table confirms the conclusions of previous years, that where a country of study is specified, the preference is overwhelmingly in favour of the region to which the donating country belongs. The only minor exception can be found in the case of Africa. Further information concerning the actual countries of study in the 31.7 per cent of cases in which there was no original specification, might go far to change this picture, probably in favour of Europe and North America as regions of study. Nevertheless, on the basis of existing information, the only element that runs counter to the general tendency can be found in the "International" offers. But again, the emphasis of these also runs heavily in favour of Europe.

Table IV. Relationship between the Main Countries of Study and Donating Regions (page 29). The figures given in this table provide a synthesis of the two preceding tables for the purpose of showing which individual countries are most frequently specified as the countries of study. This is shown in relationship to the regions from which the offers are made. The same tendencies that are revealed in Table II are supported here, except that a higher proportion of offers for study in Germany originated in North America than in Europe.

The three leading nations remain the same as in the similar table published last year; Czechoslovakia has dropped out and Sweden has replaced Egypt in the fourth position.

Table V. Principal Donating Countries and Organizations in Relation to Regions to which Fellowships are Offered (page 30). Except for the omission of Czechoslovakia, the list, which includes all countries and groups of organizations which offer a thousand or more fellowships, is the same as before. The percentage of total fellowship offers that these account for (73.9 per cent) is, however, slightly lower than those included in last year's list (78.4 per cent).

The order shown last year was: U.S.A., France, International Non-Governmental Organizations, Turkey, United Kingdom, Egypt, Sweden, United Nations and Specialized Agencies, Czechoslovakia.

Table VI. Principal Beneficiaries of Fellowships (page 31). The list shows a general conformity with the corresponding table given last year. Poland, Czechoslovakia and Belgium, which held, respectively, 16th, 20th and 21st places last year, have been omitted this year. Instead, China in 14th place, the Saar in 16th place, Switzerland in 20th place, and Puerto Rico in 21st place, have been included.

The general tendency has been for the principal 25 countries shown this year to share less (55.7 per cent) of the total fellowships offered than the 24 leading countries last year (60.9 per cent). Apart from the countries that are included for the first time, the only ones actually to increase their percentages are Canada, Netherlands, Belgium and Syria.

Table VII. Relationships between Fellowship Donors and Beneficiary Regions (page 32). In general, this table confirms the tendency, already suggested in preceding tables, for the chief sources of fellowships to students from a region to lie in that region itself. The chief exception can be found in South and East Asia. Latin America and Europe are also exceptional, but only by virtue of the number of fellowships offered to them by international organizations.

A tendency noted in previous years for donors to be more specific in naming their beneficiaries has not been continued. The percentage of unspecified beneficiaries has risen from 21.4 per cent to 23.1 per cent.

In this table, 62.1 per cent out of the 68.3 per cent of offers in which the country of study is specified are included. No very remarkable changes are shown in relation to the previous years, except in Latin America. The leading position held by Mexico in last year's table was largely accounted for by the fact that an offer of 278 scholarships by Mexico City College was reported in Volume III. This offer was not reported again in Volume IV. Similarly, the rise of Costa Rica to the leading place is accounted for by an offer by the Inter-American Institute of Agricultural Sciences of a large number of Technical Co-operation training grants, which were reported in Volume IV for the first time. The prominence of Japan as the leading country in South and East Asia for receiving foreign fellowship holders is entirely accounted for, on this occasion, by a large Chinese Government programme administered from Formosa, for sending their nationals there for study.

COMMENTARY ON THE AWARD OF FELLOWSHIPS, 1951-1952

The relationship between offers reported in Volume IV of Study Abroad and the awards that were actually made

Each year, the administrators of fellowship programmes reported in Study Abroad are asked to provide information on the actual allocation of awards that were offered the previous year. This information includes the subjects studied by the recipients of awards, the number of fellowships granted for each subject, the nationality of recipients, the number of fellowships granted to each nationality, the countries in which recipients studied, and the number who studied in each country. Essential data on the international exchange of persons are thus obtained which are not revealed in the statistical summary of offers prepared on the basis of the previous volume.

If sufficient answers were received, it would be possible to undertake a statistical analysis of allocations which could be compared with the analysis of offers at present included in Study Abroad. It would be of particular importance, for example, to know the total number of awards made in relation to the number offered and the proportion which represent awards for the donating countries' own nationals to study abroad as opposed to bringing in foreign students. Moreover, the percentage of offers in which the fields of study, country of study or nationality of beneficiaries remain unspecified, is usually too high for any general conclusions to be reached concerning the ultimate distribution of awards. Only through information as to how awards were actually made can this defect be overcome.

So far, the response to requests for information of this type has been encouraging. Many governments, foundations, universities and other institutions operating fellowship programmes have given accurate and painstaking answers. Unfortunately, however, the total quantity of information obtained in this way has not been sufficient to justify detailed statistical treatment. It seems probable that unless information concerning awards can be related to at least 60 per cent of the offers reported in Study Abroad, the conclusions might be misleading.

The next best course would seem to lie in selecting the donating countries from which the most complete reports have been received and tabulating the results received from them.

This year it has been possible to do this for the national programmes of the United Kingdom, the Netherlands and the Union of South Africa. The information is restricted, however, to the fields of study in which fellowships were awarded. The accompanying table, therefore, is given more as an example of the kind of tabulation which is possible, rather than as providing data from which general conclusions can be drawn.

United Kingdom. In Volume IV of Study Abroad an estimated 2,126 fellowship opportunities were listed under 259 programmes. Information concerning actual awards were received from 110 out of the 259 agencies responsible for programmes. This represents an estimated 1,017 offers out of the 2,126 for all national programmes. However, at least 450 out of the 2,126 offers consist of short-term vacation offers. Therefore, it can be claimed that the awards concerning which allocation is known can be related to at least 60 per cent of all offers of longer-term fellowships.

Netherlands. In Volume IV an estimated 229 fellowship opportunities were listed under 25 programmes. Information concerning actual awards was received for 20 out of these 25 programmes, showing the allocation of 178 out of the 229 fellowships offered.

Union of South Africa. In Volume IV, an estimated 104 fellowship opportunities were listed under 33 programmes. Information concerning actual awards was received for 31 out of these 33 programmes, showing the allocation of 82 out of the 104 fellowships offered.

This table shows, firstly, that the numbers of fellowships actually awarded in all these countries were considerably less, in the year covered, than those offered. This does not imply that they may not eventually have been awarded—only that they had not been awarded at the time the report was submitted. Neither does it follow that this is a general tendency that can be found in all programmes listed in Study Abroad. In many programmes the reverse is the case. Nevertheless it should be noted that many programmes do not in fact make awards every year, and that often fewer fellowships will be awarded than the number announced.

Secondly, the table reveals a more complete pattern of fellowship distribution among fields of study, once the "unspecified" offers and those for "two or more fields" have been placed under the subjects in which the awards were actually made. Additional information of this type, which, it is hoped, will be available from future enquiries, would provide an interesting comparison, in this case, with Table I of the Statistical Commentary on the offers made in Volume IV of Study Abroad. Similarly, the corresponding information, if made available, could be applied to the "unspecified" beneficiaries and countries of study.

P A R T I I

KEY TO PART II

Scholarships are listed under countries awarding them, not under countries whose nationals are eligible to apply for them, nor under countries in which they are tenable. See below instructions for using the index.

Symbols are used in this chapter as a means of abbreviation, as follows:

- = Field of Study
- = Where tenable
- ⚙ = Conditions
- 💰 = Value
- 📅 = Duration
- ★ = Number available
- 👤 = Apply to

Qualifications. It is taken for granted that recipients of awards will have a good knowledge of the language of the country in which they are going to study. If knowledge of the language is not required, it is so stated in the Conditions paragraph. Before making application for an award, prospective candidates should be satisfied that they possess all the qualifications required; they should also remember that, owing to keen competition, standards are generally high.

Applications. The address given at the end of each scholarship report is where persons should apply for further information. In general the time limit for receipt of applications is from 6 to 12 months before the beginning of the academic year. Persons wishing to study abroad should plan at least 1 year in advance.

The explanation of the small numerals ¹, ², ³ and ⁴ which appear in the Duration and Number available paragraphs is as follows:

- ¹ Award is renewable or extendable.
- ² Similar award will be offered for 1953-4.
- ³ Similar award will be offered for 1954-5.
- ⁴ Award will not be offered for 1953-4 and 1954-5.

Where there is no small numeral after the number available, it is not known whether awards will be offered in 1953-4 and 1954-5.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR USE OF THE INDEX ON PAGE 357

The index lists the awards which are available for each nationality and is further subdivided to show what subjects may be studied in which countries by the particular national concerned. An individual wishing to see for which scholarships he may be eligible should consult the index as follows:

1. Look for the name of his own country which is printed in large type across the page. (Awards open to ALL COUNTRIES and any of the other groups which include the individual or his country should also be consulted.)

2. The left-hand column below the name of country shows the subjects of study for which the scholarships are offered. The subjects are grouped under the following general headings:

Unrestricted (i.e., all subjects approved by the awarding agency).

Education.

Fine arts, applied arts, architecture.

Library science and museums.

Mass media (cinema, press, radio).

Philosophy and humanities, arts.

Science (general).

Medical sciences.

Technology and engineering sciences.

Agricultural sciences.

Social sciences.

Candidates for awards in these fields should also consult Science (general).

3. The centre column shows the country in which the scholarship holder may study.
"Unrestricted" means in any country.
4. The right-hand column gives numbers of scholarships which refer back to Part II, pages 41 to 349, which lists scholarships numbered A 1 to A 1893.

UNITED NATIONS AND ITS SPECIALIZED AGENCIES

(A 1)
UNITED NATIONS, New York, N.Y.,
U.S.A.

United Nations Internships for (a) Junior National Civil Servants and Employees of International Non-governmental Organizations; (b) Students

■ UN organization

- (a) U.S.A.: New York
- (b) U.S.A. (New York) or Switzerland (Geneva)

■ (a) is available to civil servants of UN Member States and to employees of international non-governmental organizations affiliated to United Nations; age 25 to 35 for civil servants; no age limit for employees of international non-governmental organizations; (b) is available to students from UN Member States; age 20 to 30; must be in the final year of degree course, or student at graduate school, or have completed course of graduate or undergraduate study during 1953. Civil servants and students must be nominated by their own governments, but for the student programme universities and other institutions may nominate scholarship internes directly to the United Nations if they undertake to pay the allowance (£300 for 8 weeks). Recipients work as staff members in the UN Secretariat and attend lectures on the work of the Secretariat and on international problems given by competent authorities in the Secretariat.

■ 8 weeks [(a) during the spring and autumn; (b) during the summer, both in Geneva and New York]

★ (a) 40 for civil servants and 10 for employees of international non-governmental organizations

(b) 30

■ Relevant department in candidate's own government or organization
